Nancy Thompson Learning Commons (NTLC)

Associate Director of Learning Support Services

Under the supervision of the Director of Learning Support Services (LSS), the Associate Director of Learning Support Services (Associate Director 3) assists with managing LSS, with a focus on the Writing Center. The Associate Director works with the Director to assist with programming to meet the needs of NTLC in its ongoing transformation through dynamic changes in all aspects of Learning Support Services and the connectivity to research and scholarly works. The Associate Director will implement training and oversight of an increasingly networked, interactive and collaborative environment in which student are provided support anytime and anywhere, not just remediation or skill sets development. The Associate Director will continuously work to meet the needs of the Kean University community at large and uphold the NTLC mission that ensures equity, access and academic excellence through data-driven decision-making and practice. These include changes in how student learning is acquired, delivered, consumed, shared and reconstituted among Kean University students, faculty and staff for educational, research and professional development purposes.

The Associate Director manages day-to-day activities, with a primary focus on the Writing Center and designs and implements innovative writing support programs and initiatives to address the needs of a diverse student population. The Associate Director is responsible for training and evaluating assigned personnel, including the use of data-driven assessment and hiring; and does related work as required.
