The University of California, Berkeley, is one of the world's leading institutions of higher education, distinguished by its combination of internationally recognized academic and research excellence; the transformative opportunity it provides to a large and diverse student body; its public mission and commitment to equity and social justice; and its roots in the California experience, animated by such values as innovation, questioning the status quo, and respect for the environment and nature. Since its founding in 1868, Berkeley has fueled a perpetual renaissance, generating unparalleled intellectual, economic and social value in California, the United States and the world.

We are looking for equity-minded applicants who represent the full diversity of California and who demonstrate a sensitivity to and understanding of the diverse academic, socioeconomic, cultural, disability, gender identity, sexual orientation, and ethnic backgrounds present in our community. When you join the team at Berkeley, you can expect to be part of an inclusive, innovative and equity-focused community that approaches higher education as a matter of social justice that requires broad collaboration among faculty, staff, students and community partners. In deciding whether to apply for a position at Berkeley, you are strongly encouraged to consider whether your values align with our Guiding Values and Principles, our Principles of Community, and our Strategic Plan.

At UC Berkeley, we believe that learning is a fundamental part of working, and our goal is for everyone on the Berkeley campus to feel supported and equipped to realize their full potential. We actively support this by providing all of our staff employees with at least 80 hours (10 days) of paid time per year to engage in professional development activities. Departmental Overview

Based in Berkeley's Rausser College of Natural Resources, the new James M. and Cathleen D. Stone Center for Large Landscape Conservation at UC Berkeley (Stone Center) aims to catalyze new forms of university engagement to increase the pace, scale, equity and durability of large scale conservation. The Stone Center will pursue this mission through community-engaged research, stakeholder workshops, training initiatives, policy advising, and public communications. A central element of the Stone Center's work is to support multiple "Living Labs," where university scientists work with -- and learn from - communities on the front lines of environmental change. The first of these is the Beyond Yellowstone Program in Wyoming, the second will be based in California, and others are to be determined. In its first 5 years, the Stone Center's faculty directors expect to develop a strong emphasis on the conservation of economically and culturally important biodiversity in the western United States. Initial campus partners include Berkeley Wildlife, the Berkeley Institute for Parks, Biodiversity and People, and the Eric and Wendy Schmidt Center for Data Science and Environment.

The Stone Center team will include administrative and communications staff, program (i.e., Living Lab) managers, postdoctoral scientists, and a network of faculty affiliates and student researchers.

Position Summary

The Executive Director will provide creative vision and energetic leadership to the Stone Center, cultivating a high impact research program on large-scale, collaborative, trans-jurisdictional nature conservation, and connecting this program to community partners and policymakers through convening, training, and communications initiatives. Working with two faculty co-directors, the Executive Director will expand the Stone Center's initial mission, vision and goals into a long-term strategic plan, and lead all aspects of the center's day- to-day operations, including providing senior management oversight for a number of research and professional staff, and for projects involving many postdoctoral scientists and student trainees.

Application Review Date

The First Review Date for this job is: 04/29/2024. For full consideration, please apply by 05/17/2024. This job is open until filled.

Responsibilities

Planning and administration:

- Develops and implements the mission, vision, and goals of the Stone Center and designs research and outreach programs that connect Berkeley research with collaborative landscape conservation efforts.
- Plays a critical role in building, supporting, and retaining an administrative, research, communications, and outreach team that will become the operational backbone of the Stone Center.
- Manages the Stone Center's day-to-day operations, including supervising the professional staff and working with affiliated faculty to support postdoctoral scholars and students engaged in Center projects.
- Manages the Stone Center's budget including planning, directing and controlling program budget and managing financial, human resources, technical, and other supporting resources.
- Works closely with administrative staff and affiliated faculty to coordinate with Campus Shared Services on all matters related to financial and human resources support services.
- Regularly compares the Stone Center's outcomes and overall effectiveness to the mission, vision, goals and objectives, and recommends changes accordingly.

Research and outreach:

- Oversees research and outreach on large-scale, collaborative, cross-jurisdictional conservation efforts, including events for visiting researchers and speakers and supportive student fellowships and grants.
- Collaborates across research groups and units, including Berkeley Wildlife, Schmidt Center for Data Science and Environment, and the Institute for Parks, People and Biodiversity, to co-produce quantitative and qualitative research that evaluates and/or guides conservation decision-making.
- Provides leadership and support to research coordinators of multiple Living Labs to develop community-engaged research and outreach on large-scale conservation efforts which align with the Center's mission.
- Cultivates high-impact research products evaluating large-scale land and water conservation outcomes and identifying future innovations are grounded in insights from multiple Living Labs.
- Coordinates varied and competing requirements associated with managing an innovative research program in a university and/or government environment.
- Travels occasionally (<10% of working time) to represent Stone Center and/or Living Lab research and scholarship, primarily in the western United States and/or Washington, DC.

Communications:

- Represents the program and its research to elected officials, government agencies, Tribal leaders, non-profit leaders, journalists, and the broader public and empowers other relevant team members to do so.
- Oversees the production of high-quality reports, white papers, and perspective pieces on the work of the Stone Center (including potentially authoring or co-authoring such outputs)
- Participates in select, high-visibility conferences, seminars, and workshops.
- Oversees and works closely with a communications officer, and partners, to develop and publish communications and outreach materials consistent with the Stone Center's mission and vision.

Fundraising:

- Obtains funding from multiple external sources including government agencies, foundations, and individual donors.
- Coordinates with faculty co-directors and campus development to communicate effectively with
