Utah Tech is an open, inclusive, comprehensive, polytechnic university. The institution has enjoyed rapid growth over the past decade, including through significant program expansion, a transformative building campaign, enhanced infrastructure across its distinctively beautiful campus, an award-winning branding effort, dramatically increased student enrollment, expanded fundraising, and a name change that highlights its commitment to a broad comprehensive polytechnic mission.

The ideal candidate should have proven effectiveness in broad and progressively responsible leadership experience in complex organizations, particularly in higher education or related environments; possess a deep understanding and passion for higher education and its impact on regional and state development; demonstrate a leadership style that prioritizes integrity, professionalism, and ethics while ensuring accountability for themselves and other institutional leaders; and be a unifying team builder and team player who inspires trust, credibility, and confidence with stakeholders. A bachelor's degree is required, and a graduate degree is preferred.
